

Hinesville Among Best Places for Job Seekers in Georgia

NerdWallet considers income, affordability, population growth, and unemployment rates

San Francisco, CA (November 5, 2013) – NerdWallet, a consumer advocacy website, recently conducted a study to find the best places for job seekers in Georgia – and Hinesville is in the top ten.

As many people continue searching for employment in this recovering economy, NerdWallet wanted to help residents of the Peach State find the best places for jobs. To do so, NerdWallet evaluated 32 of the state's largest cities using the following criteria:

- Median household income
- Monthly homeowner costs
- Population growth of those ages 16 and older
- Unemployment rates

NerdWallet ranked Hinesville as the ninth best place for job seekers in Georgia. The town experienced a 10.9 percent population growth between 2009 and 2011, making it one of the fastest-growing cities in the state. Major employers include Liberty Regional Medical Center, Fort Stewart, and SNF, Inc.

“Hinesville is one of the best places for job seekers in southeast Georgia,” said NerdWallet analyst Annie Wang. “Local institutions such as the city library offer online resources such as tutorials, job directories, and resume builders for those looking for employment.”

Other places on the list include Dunwoody and Athens-Clarke County. Read the full study online.
