Hinesville ranks in ‘Hardest-Working City’ in America list

According to a recent study by Badcredit.org, Hinesville ranked #14 out of 20 cities that represent the hardest working populations in America.

“By raw data alone, the industrious people of Hinesville, Georgia are some of the hardest-working folks in the United States,” said Steven Richmond, Badcredit.org Editor-in-Chief. “Roughly two in three people participate in the local workforce, spending nearly an hour a day on average just to get to and from work.”

This study was based on data from the U.S. Census Bureau of Labor Statistic. The cities rankings were based on the percentage of population in the workforce, household income with children, average commute time and average hours worked weekly.

“We applaud the citizens of Hinesville and the service members of Fort Stewart for everything they do to make our community and this nation a better place in which to work, grow and live,” said Hinesville Mayor James Thomas.
